What a year it has been for all of us. When the country shut down in late March 2020, no one could foresee the prolonged impact we were all about to experience.

We are humbled to acknowledge that because of supporters and partners like you, the National Forest Foundation weathered the year in good condition, and even continued our growth trajectory. Thank you.

For those who could access and experience it, the outdoors was a renewed or newfound haven from the impact of the pandemic. Visitation increased on all National Forests and Grasslands across the country. With no concerts or sports events and limited travel options, more people than ever began to explore new hobbies. Outdoor recreational items, such as boats, bikes, or RVs to name a few, became hard to find or were backordered.

We know that easy, safe, and comfortable access to green space is not available to everyone. As an organization, we realize that we must increase our efforts to ensure that National Forests and Grasslands are accessible to all those who are interested.

There is always so much that we can highlight in our Annual Reports, and rarely enough space to cover everything you help us to accomplish. In this report, you will read about our Conservation Connect Fellows who help expand our knowledge and impact. We are grateful for their interest in, and work to benefit our National Forest System.

You will also read about our work on the White Mountain National Forest in New Hampshire; the first National Forest in the Eastern United States. Our work on Bill Williams Mountain in Arizona is helping the Navajo and Hopi through the Wood for Life effort, while also improving forest resilience.

Our campaign to plant 50 million trees on our National Forests continues to progress at a good pace. As wildfires and other disturbances continue to affect our forests across the country, this tree planting campaign becomes increasingly important. Thank you for your support to date.

We are grateful for the reach we achieved through our National Forest Week campaign this year. We had planned to have engagement at a personal level in National Forests and Grasslands across the country. Obviously, that was not possible. Staff at the National Forest Foundation quickly pivoted to provide a successful virtual celebration. We hope you were able to participate in at least one virtual event. We also look forward to your engagement in 2021!

At a time when it seems our country is deeply divided, we are grateful for the work the NFF does to unite diverse perspectives. Much of that work occurs through our Conservation Connect program. We hope you enjoy the story about one example in Idaho of the work we do to develop common ground among diverse perspectives for the betterment of our public lands.

Please enjoy this Annual Report for our 2020 fiscal year and know that each of you played a role in our accomplishments. We are grateful to each of you for helping us improve America's incredible National Forests and Grasslands.

Sincerely,

Mary Mitsos
NFF President & CEO

2020 Project Spotlights

Idaho Panhandle Forest Collaborative

In 2020, the Idaho Panhandle Forest Collaborative (PFC), facilitated by the NFF, submitted a joint application for the Collaborative Forest Landscape Restoration Program with two other collaboratives in North Idaho. The Secretary of Agriculture recently approved the application and the Joint Collaboratives Forest Landscape Restoration Project will likely begin receiving $1.5M in funding in 2022. The PFC's collaboration with the Idaho Panhandle National Forest (IPNF) continues to yield impressive results. The IPNF involves the PFC early in project development, is responsive to the PFC's recommendations, and benefits from the social license that the PFC gives projects.

Conservation Connect Fellows

In 2020, the NFF hosted nine graduate students as Conservation Connect Fellows. The program aims to align NFF's collaboration and conservation work with a practicum and experiential education opportunity. The NFF gives Fellows the chance to gain direct experience in a variety of NFF and partner functions, specifically in collaborative processes and on-the-ground science applications.

This year's cohort supported a variety of projects including the San Gabriel Mountains Community Collaborative, the Find Your Fourteener campaign, inclusivity and accessibility within the Matching Awards Program, and more.

Tree Planting Campaign

In a year unlike any other, our 50 Million For Our Forests campaign continued to address the critical reforestation needs on our National Forests. Despite a handful of delays and cancellations caused by the pandemic, there are now more than 5.6 million trees growing across our National Forests—the most we've ever planted in a single year. Each tree will have ripple effects on the ecosystems they inhabit: restoring watersheds, improving wildlife habitat, mitigating the impacts of climate change—extending to the communities and cities beyond the forests.

White Mountain National Forest

On New Hampshire's White Mountain National Forest, we continued our Treasured Landscapes restoration work. In partnership with the U.S. Forest Service and local community partners, we focused our efforts on increasing opportunities that provide ecologically-sustainable recreation and improved forest health.

2020's projects included the renovation of Glen Ellis Falls Scenic Area - one of the Forest's most popular developed recreation sites. We also restored climber access trails at Cathedral Ledge as well as roads and site renovations for Dolly Copp Campground - one of the largest campgrounds in the National Forest System and one of the most popular sites on the Forest.

NATIONAL Forest WEEK<sup>SM</sup>

In July 2020, we celebrated our National Forests and Grasslands with thousands of Americans during our second annual National Forest Week<sup>SM</sup>. And while our in-person gatherings were limited, our virtual celebrations and events brought us together. We invited forest-lovers to celebrate National Forests through social media, a photo contest, and even a limited-edition t-shirt. From our corporate partners and the Forest Service to our on-the-ground partners and more, we were overwhelmed with the support for our National Forests.

Bill Williams Mountain Restoration Project

In Northern Arizona, the NFF is leading one of our most complex restoration projects to date. Working closely with numerous funding and on-the-ground partners, the NFF is conducting steep slope forest restoration at Bill Williams Mountain on the Kaibab National Forest. The mountain poses a serious fire and flood risk to not only the town of Williams but to as far as Phoenix and their water supply. Using helicopters, contractors remove hazardous fuels and thin dense forest stands at the mountain's summit. By investing in critical restoration projects today, we hope make the area more resilient and adaptable to climate change in the future.
